Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) Minor

The TESOL Minor provides undergraduate students from any major with the minimum qualifications to teach English to adults in a variety of language programs in the United States and abroad. Prescribed courses include knowledge about the English language, approaches to teaching English, as well as tutoring and team teaching experiences in authentic ESL instructional settings. Students who obtain a TESOL Minor typically seek teaching positions in private language institutes or as private language tutors in the United States and abroad as well as through organizations such as the Peace Corps and the Fulbright Exchange. In addition, upon graduation students are encouraged to participate in one of the international teaching exchanges sponsored by the Department of Applied Linguistics.

Prescribed courses (12 credits)

APLNG 200 Introduction to Language, Culture, and Social Interaction
APLNG 210 The Ecology of Global English
